Throw in hundreds of your friends, music, food, cocktails and more, and this weekend adds up to be your best weekend in 2025.

Ohana Traditions...Sixteen Years and Still Goin' Strong

Live Music

Smokin' surf rock from 9th Wave, Uke Jams and other Great Performers to be announced soon!

Thursday Night Kick-Off Party

Ohana blasts off with a wacky party that guarantees loads of fun. The theme changes every year, and you can count on attendees to go all out with their costumes and props. The only predictable thing about this party is that it will be a total hoot!

Mini Golf Tournament

Grab a group and visit one of Lake George's good time mini golf venues, then turn in your score for a shot at the trophy.

And it's All for Charity!

The Fraternal Order of Moai Foundation is a 501(c)(3), making Ohana a "party with a purpose!"

A majority of the proceeds from Ohana: Luau at the Lake go to support the Easter Island Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to conservation, preservation, and education of the cultural heritage of Easter Island.

Ohana Room Crawl

Exotic libations served up by your friends with a generous dose of creativity and over-the-top decor!

Cocktail Contest

Mixers of amazing original cocktail creations vie for the coveted title.

Polynesian Luau

Saturday night brings a traditional Luau with Kalua Pig and all the fixings. Slow cooked all day in authentic Hawaiian style. And while eating, prepare to be dazzled by the Pearl of Paradise Polynesian Dinner Review. Traditional hula and fire dancers will entertain and delight you while you enjoy the flavors of Polynesia.

Mystery Bowl Auction

Anyone can bid to win a delicious drink served up with an exotic dance by lovely (or outrageous!) presenters, and keep the tiki bowl.

Tiki Carvers, Artists & Vendors

All weekend you'll be thrilled by talented artists who will tempt you with their art & products and vendors who offer up treasures from the past.

Free Goodies and Much, Much more

All attendees will get one of our famous Swag Bags, full of fantastic goodies and souvenirs. We'll also have plenty of merchandise, contests, a silent auction, raffles, and fun activities throughout the weekend. Sound like too much? Don't worry. We run on "Island Time" too, and have paced the weekend so you'll have plenty of time to see and do everything, and still have lots of time to socialize and relax.

TIKI TAKES LAKE GEORGE

By Anthony F. Hall

For a group of three hundred people who assembled in Lake George Village last weekend, the Tiki Resort is a shrine.

"This is the last authentic tiki resort in the east, perhaps in the country," said Mike Sullivan. "The Polynesian show is one of the best in the world. People come from all over to visit this place."

Sullivan, a Connecticut businessman, is the organizer of "Ohana: the Luau at the Lake," an annual gathering of Tiki worshippers.

For three days, Hawaiian shirts, rum cocktails, swinging bachelor music and high kitsch collectibles are not merely tolerated, they're de rigueur.

"Tiki was never really cool; that's sort of why it's cool now," said a tattooed young man who identified himself only by his (inaudible) on-line pseudonym.

"It's really all about mid-century modernism, and embraces everything from that era—movies, music, food, drinks and clothing," said actress Kelly Patterson, who writes and performs as a demented, 1950s Martha Stewart type in a video series called the Velvet Lounge Kitsch-ers. "Since Mad Men became such a hit, the Tiki-era is even more popular."

For some people, Tiki is a joke they can't quite get. But its appeal transcends age, gender and geography, said Sullivan.

"It's all about escapism," said Sullivan. "That's what it was about in the 1950s. People couldn't go to Hawaii or Polynesia, but they could escape their daily lives by going to Tiki bars, restaurants and floor shows. We do the same thing, but for us, it's retro; we're returning to a simpler time."

And throughout those three days, "the Spirit of Aloha—harmony—reigns," said Sullivan.

"There are no egos, no VIPs, we break bread and party together," said Sullivan. "Ohana, after all, means family."

"The event is really the result of the people," said Sullivan. "I can book the bands and set the agenda, but it's the people who make the thing go. They don't need me."

"Where else can three hundred people drink for three days together and there's not one fight?" asked Beth Gerrig, who said she became entranced with Tiki once she began collecting Tiki bar glasses, mugs and wood carvings.

There were plenty of collectibles at the Silent Auction, which raised funds for the Easter Island Foundation. The foundation supports the protection of the Polynesian island's ecology, economy and culture.

"Ours is a charitable event," said Sullivan.

Nevertheless, a good cause was not allowed to stand in the way of a good time, and the Tiki worshippers kicked off the weekend with a cruise aboard the Mohican.

"It was a maritime theme; costumes ranged from Thurston Howell to Cap'n Crunch," said Sullivan.

The costume winners were Kelly Patterson and her husband Paul Spencer, who went attired as shipwrecked zombies.

The next day included miniature golf tournaments and a moveable party through rooms themed and decorated for the weekend.

A cocktail contest was held Saturday afternoon, in which amateur mixologists competed to make the best rum confection.

One of the contestants was Steven Wahlin, from Minneapolis, whose entry was a fruit orchid.

LAKE GEORGE - If loving Hawaiian kitsch is "sarong," the members of the Fraternal Order of Moai don't want to be so right.

The national social network dedicated to the preservation of Polynesian pop has found paradise at the Tiki Resort, the site of its annual "Ohana, Luau at the Lake" celebration.

"It is probably the last place of its kind in the United States," said Mike Sullivan, a founder of the group who goes by the nickname "Bargoyle." "In the '60s era, Tiki was king. This is a temple to it."

The upstate New York village, with its mid-century modern architecture and vintage tourist attractions, is a welcome blast from the past for the tiki-philies, who have been descending on the destination for the past five years...

....Hosted by the Fraternal Order of Moai, a nationwide organization of people interested in the pop-Polynesian aesthetic, the event included performances by surf-rock bands, outdoor vintage-movie screenings and, of course, a luau—with proceeds benefitting the Rapa Nui people of Easter Island. In 2010 the festivities moved to June 24–26, in hopes of more sarong-compatible weather...
